Allodium enhances its Enterprise credibility with ISO 27001:2022 Certification and SOC 2® Type II Attestation

Catenai PLC (AIM: CTAI), the AIM-quoted provider of technology and digital solutions, notes that Allodium Ltd ("Allodium"), its investee company and developer of a no-code AI Agent Operating System, has achieved ISO 27001:2022 certification and received its SOC 2® Type II attestation, enhancing its potential to sell to enterprise clients.

ISO 27001:2022 is the internationally recognised standard for information security management systems. Certification confirms that Allodium operates a structured, audited framework for managing information security risks across its people, processes, and technology. Many enterprise sized organisations will only transact with supplier partners that can demonstrate this level of compliance.

SOC 2® is an attestation standard governed by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) that evaluates whether an organisation's controls related to security operate effectively over a defined observation period.

Allodium received its SOC 2® Type II report following an audit conducted by Atom Assurances.

Together, these represent independent, third-party assurance of Allodium's information security practices and its commitment to protecting customer data.

This milestone strengthens Allodium's position to support enterprise deployments, where robust data governance, access controls, and operational assurance are critical requirements for adoption.

John Frizelle, Founder and CEO of Allodium, commented:

"As AI agents take on real work inside enterprise environments, security and compliance are not optional. They are fundamental to what we are building. Our ISO 27001 certification and SOC 2 Type II attestation reflect the work our team has put into building a platform that organisations of every type and size can trust."

John Farthing, CEO of Catenai PLC, commented:

"Achieving both ISO 27001 and SOC 2® Type II at this stage in Allodium's development is a significant step. It demonstrates a level of operational maturity that we believe will accelerate Allodium's commercial progress, particularly with enterprise and institutional customers for whom security assurance is a prerequisite."
